Holographic communication

We will communicate through video calls in which we will be able to interact with the other person in real size and in three dimensions. Thanks to augmented reality, 5G and edge computing, telepresence will bring people in different places together in the same space, using holograms that blend the physical world with the virtual world, in real time. This will facilitate medical check-ups, job interviews, technical assistance and many more experiences.